Proposed Emoji: PCC Streetcar Trolley

For Consideration of the Unicode Consortium

1. Identification & Metadata

Intro: The Strategic Importance of Transportation Iconography

As the stewards of humanity's new and evolving hieroglyphic international digital lexicon, perhaps it will be duly appreciated that the precise transportation iconography serves as a vital record of urban evolution and technological progress. This emoji submission aims to address a handful of significant representative and cultural/aesthetic voids currently exists between the era of steam rail and modern high-speed transit.

While the use cases of the PCC Streetcar Trolley emoji I have designed are diverse and numerous, it is first and foremost intended to imply or make reference to the "First Electric Era", roughly coinciding with the Progressive Era, and generally understood to have come to an end during the Depression of the 1930's through the encoding of the PCC Streetcar as a permanent fixture in of the Unicode Standard.

Established by the Electric Railway Presidents' Conference Committee (ERPCC) shortly prior to the catastrophic stock market crash in 1929, the PCC Streetcar Trolley was a revolutionary, high-performance vehicle designed to standardize urban mobility and compete with the burgeoning automobile industry. As a streamlined, Art Deco masterpiece, the PCC car is not merely a regional artifact but the technological precursor to the modern Light Rail Vehicle (LRV), representing a critical transition in global transit history.

Submission Details

Created & Submitted by: Alex Barber | Submission Date: Friday 4/04/2026

Value: Distinctly identify the North American trolley as distinct from the TRAM emoji.

Proposed Name: PCC Streetcar Trolley

Keywords (English): streetcar, trolley, trolley car, tram, heritage-railway, vintage-transit, electric-traction, LRV-precursor, Art-Deco, transit, EV, tramway, street railway, interurban

Category: Travel & Places

Sub-category: transport-ground

Alignment with Unicode Hierarchy:

The descriptive criteria above aligns the PCC Streetcar Trolley with the current Unicode structural hierarchy under "Travel & Places." By incorporating keywords that bridge historical heritage and modern electric traction, this proposal ensures discoverability for users discussing both 20th-century urban history and sustainable transit futures.

2. Image Assets & Licensing Warranty

Contextual Overview: The Visual Heritage of the PCC Streetcar

The PCC Streetcar is defined by its Art Deco-inspired streamlining, a design movement that favored curved exterior corners and smoothed surfaces to evoke speed and modernity. Its silhouette is distinct from the existing "Tram" emoji ( ), which typically reflects a boxy, Soviet-style aesthetic. The PCC car is characterized by its rounded profile and the prominent trolley pole required for overhead current collection.

Instructions for Sprite Sheet Rendering

To maintain legibility at all resolutions, image assets must adhere to the following specifications:

Color and Black & White: Both versions must be provided to accommodate varied system themes.

Required Sizes: Explicit renderings in 18×18 and 72×72 pixel formats are attached, in addition to the higher resolution renderings.

Visual Differentiators

Designers must emphasize the following non-negotiable traits:

1. The smoothed, rounded front and rear exterior corners.

2. The iconic trolley pole extending from the roof to an overhead wire.

3. The inclusion of "standee windows" (small secondary apertures above passenger windows) or the expansive "post-war picture window" variant to maximize iconic recognizability.

Licensing Declaration

Submitter (Alex Barber) grants the Unicode Consortium a non-exclusive, irrevocable, perpetual, worldwide, royalty-free license to encode the proposed emoji and to sublicense it under the Consortium's various open-source licenses. Submitter warrants that the images provided are original works, in the public domain, or subject to open-source licenses (such as CC BY 3.0), as documented in the supporting technical files.gConnective Tissue

These distinct visual traits are functional signifiers; the specific geometry of the PCC car allows for universal recognition as a "streetcar" across diverse linguistic and cultural contexts.

3. Factors for Inclusion: Thematic & Conceptual Value

Strategic Context: The First Electric Era

The "First Electric Era" represents the first successful global pivot toward zero-emission urban transit. Documenting this period is vital for users discussing sustainable heritage. The PCC car, born from the 1929 ERPCC initiative, represents the absolute peak of this technological era.

Multiple Concepts & Symbolism

The PCC Streetcar functions as a powerful metaphor for several concepts.

Americana: Evoking the "golden age" of mid-century American city life.

Design Innovation: Representing the streamlining movement and the transition from utilitarian to aesthetic industrial design.

Zero-Emission Heritage: Serving as the historical root of modern green city planning.

Electric Traction Heritage: Symbolic of the global shift from horse and steam power to electric propulsion.

Sequences

The PCC Streetcar facilitates complex conceptual communication through sequences.

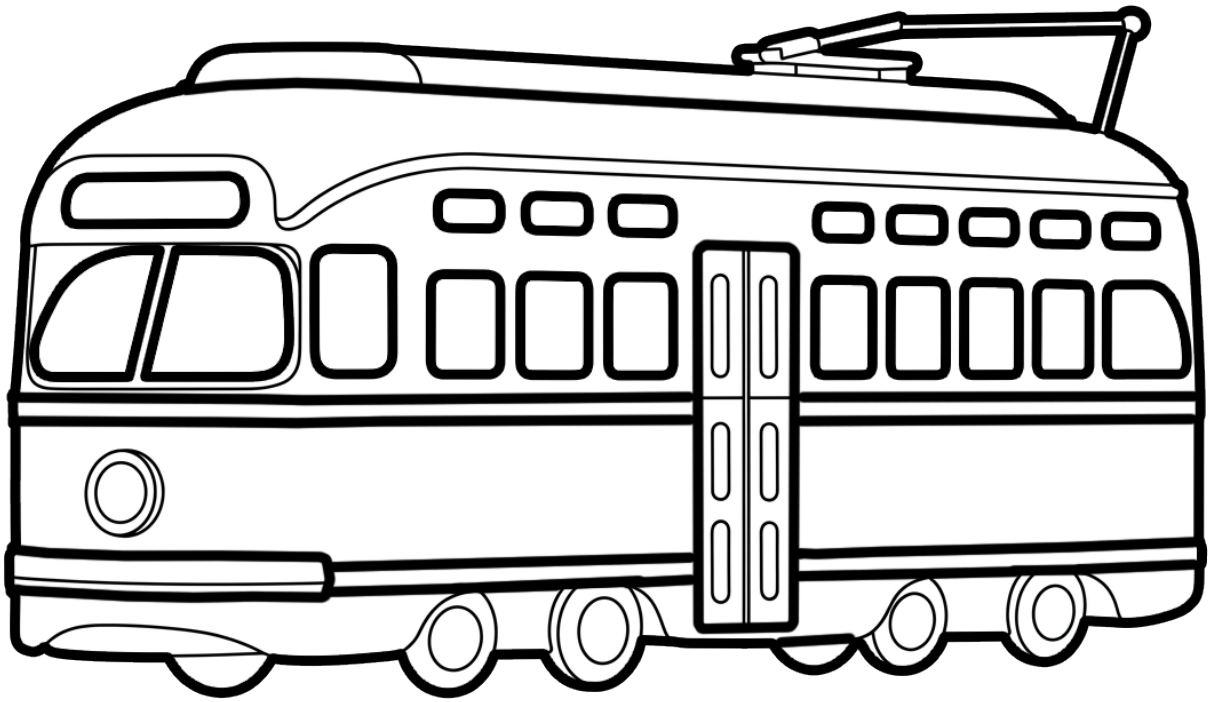
[Cityscape] + [PCC Streetcar]: "Historic District Transit."

[Museum] + [PCC Streetcar]: "Heritage Preservation."

[Spark/Lightning] + [PCC Streetcar]: "Electric Traction Heritage."

Breaking New Ground

The PCC design breaks new ground by contrasting with the existing "boxy/ Soviet-style" Tram emoji (often modeled after the Tatra T3/T4R or Konstal 105Na). By introducing the streamlined PCC silhouette—the global paradigm for the West and later a standard for the Eastern Bloc—Unicode fills a gap between the Steam Locomotive (🚂) and the modern internal combustion era.



4. Evidence of Frequency: Data Analysis

Analytical Introduction

Frequency data demonstrates that the PCC Streetcar is a global phenomenon. Its technology was not limited to North America; it was licensed to major European manufacturers and exported as far as Egypt and South America.

SEO Analysis

The following data reflects the international relevance of the PCC car.

Platform & Results Count / Context

Yahoo! Japan

~3,990 cases for "アメリカのPCC路面電車" (American PCC Streetcar).

Flickr (TRAM Worldwide)

131,907 items, documenting significant PCC usage.

Wikipedia/Wiki Statistics

5,000+ units built in the US; 13,991 Tatra T3 units sold worldwide.

Global Export Proof

Sale of Toronto Transit Commission (TTC) units to Alexandria, Egypt (1966-1968).

Comparative Analysis: The so-called “Elephant" Requirement

In accordance with Unicode guidelines, "PCC Streetcar" has been compared against the baseline term "Elephant." While "Elephant" maintains higher raw volume, the "PCC Streetcar" exhibits a consistent, non-cyclical search volume over a 15-year period. This stability proves the term is a permanent fixture in transit literature and urban history, not a transient fad.

Pop Culture & Literature Analysis

The streetcar's iconic status is reinforced by high-visibility appearances.

Cinema: The San Francisco K-line in Dirty Harry, many films shot in San Francisco, Boston or Philadelphia – period pieces.

Advertising: Major campaigns for Dockers and a Restylane TV commercial.

Public Art: Murals in the Toronto Eglinton West station.

Connective Tissue

This data confirms a persistent, global demand for an icon representing this specific technological class, which remains a cornerstone of transportation history.

A PCC Streetcar can be seen in MBTA Service in Boston in the 80's.

5. Factors for Exclusion: Refutation of Counter-Arguments

Contextual Overview

This proposal adheres to the strict exclusion criteria of the Unicode Consortium, ensuring the PCC Streetcar Trolley does not fall into automatically declined categories.

Refutation of "Already Represented"

Critics may argue the "Tram" (🚊) or "Mountain Railway" (🚞) emojis suffice. However, these represent different technological eras. Using a boxy Soviet-style tram to represent the entirety of electric traction throughout history is equivalent to using a unicycle emoji to represent a motorcycle; They're not a monolith. The PCC car represents a specific aesthetic and technological leap—electric traction combined with Art Deco streamlining—that existing icons fail to convey - the art deco design milieu being especially lacking in spite of its enduring popularity.

Addressing "Overly Specific"

The PCC design is not a localized model of tram. It is a universal technology standard, and one of the first of its kind in that regard —something I hope you at the Unicode Consortium would especially resect, at least as much as say, the USB people or ICANN.

The design was actually licensed to Fiat (Italy), La Brugeoise et Nivelles (Belgium), and ČKD Tatra (Czechia). With over 18,000 units (including the Tatra T3) produced globally, it represents an important high-water mark for the original electric vehicles of the 20th century.

Refutation of "Transient/Fad"

The PCC Streetcar has been in continuous revenue service since the 1930s (e.g., Boston's Mattapan Line). Its century-long service life and its role in the modern "Heritage Line" trend in cities like San Francisco and Philadelphia prove its permanence. The remainder of the PDF Contains Examples of the enduring popularity and interest in the PCC Streetcar Trolley.

Alternative Renderings of the PCC Streetcar in Various Ecosystem's Design Languages

The following attachments illustrate the enduring interest in an relevance of the North American PCC Streetcar, with its history distinct and unique from that of the boxier Eurasian Tram with which it is frequently conflated. You will see that interest in and discussion about the North American PCC Streetcar Trolley is both global and frequent.

The PCC Street Car

The initials PCC stood for Presidents Conference Committee. This group designed an all-purpose streetcar in the 1930s which could be used on street car lines in major cities throughout the United States. The Presidents Conference Committee was composed of the presidents of the various private street car companies across the nation. The PCC car was streamlined, a popular form of design in the 1930s which curved the exterior corners of the car and smoothed all the outside surfaces.

Looking like it just rolled off the production line at the factory, a PCC car poses at the Pike's Peak Historical Street Railway museum in Colorado Springs, Colorado. PCC cars never operated in Colorado Springs. This car was purchased from Philadelphia.

NEXT

A PCC car rolls down Germantown Avenue in Philadelphia. This street car is operating as a historic tourist trolley rather than in regular transit service. The green and cream paint scheme was used on Philadelphia trolleys from the 1940s to the 1960s.

NEXT

Details of PCC cars varied from city to city. This was the interior configuration used in Philadelphia. The "standee windows" above the passenger windows allowed standing riders to see when their stop was coming up.

The Cairo buses might have changed but the old tram, or metro as it's called in Cairo, sure remains the same!

Tom Robertson The "tram" in this photo is an ex-streetcar sold surplus by my home town, Toronto, known as a PCC type in North America, I believe. Thanks for looking.

The PCC streetcar is actually second-hand from Los Angeles. It was Alexandria that purchased the some former Toronto units. Either way, very nice photo!

the history of cairo PCC
The sale of Los Angeles PCC cars to Cairo, Egypt was announced by the Southern California Rapid Transit District in June 1965 after PCC 3107 had been sent to Cairo for trials. The value of the contract was $321,000 including 134 cars, spare parts and shipping charges. The Los Angeles PCC were in fine condition thanks to the superb maintenance, so it was a real good deal for Cairo Transport Authority, which used large fleet of different Belgium and local built trams at that time. At total, 65 cars of 1937/38 batch went to Cairo. In Cairo they were numbered into 1000-series, approx. 22 from 134 sold cars were used for spare parts in Cairo and never saw the regular service. The cars were shipped to Cairo in the MTA livery and they were repainted to green and cream colors in the CTA workshops. As the years wore on, the Cairo cars took on an increasingly battered appearance, however last of them remained in active service until 1981. In late 1970s, they were used on routes 1 (Abbasia circle route), 8 (Shourbra El Mezallat circle route), 22 (Abbasia - Saida Zeinab) and 24 (Zahir Square - Saida Zeinab). In 1970 Cairo joined Sarajevo as the only operators of both American and Czech PCC when first of the Tatra K5 articulated cars arrived.

MBTA PCC Cars

Trolley Car No.10 is back ... On track!

MBTA 3321 - The last trolley built in Massachusetts, as it looked when it arrived at SFTM.

MBTA 3321 after the old paint and windows were removed and primer applied.

MBTA 3321 with roof and window belt painted.

Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority (MBTA) 3299 and 3321 These "PCC" Cars are trolley cars built in 1951 by the Pullman-Standard company of Worcester, MA, for the Metropolitan Transit Authority (MTA), later to become the MBTA. They ran in Boston, MA for their entire service life, from 1951 to 1985. They served primarily on what is now the Green Line. They were then stored for a number of years, before being used in an abortive streetcar project in Brooklyn NY, which left them stored on an exposed pier. They were flooded by Hurricane Sandy and brought to the Museum in 2015. This style of PCC Car was called a "Picture Window" car because of the large side windows. MBTA 3321 is the last trolley car built in Massachusetts.

In 2022 we had the cars "sand" blasted and primed, and ordered new windows for 3321. We plan to cosmetically restore these cars; 3321 to the orange and cream of the MTA in the 1950's, and 3329 to the 1970's "Green Line" appearance. Please do not go inside these cars.

Here are some pictures of the PCC cars prior to their arrival at SFTM.

Here is a blog post of memories of riding the PCC cars in Boston by Joan Livingston.

Please make an Online Donation for the PCC Cars Fund.

Here is sister car MBTA 3295 at the Watertown Carhouse in May 1983.

Here is picture window PCC car MBTA 3303 and a sister on a fan trip in Spring 1978. Probably Newton Highlands on the Green Line. SFTM founder Dave Bartlett and wife Polly Bartlett are in the rear window.

Here is picture window PCC car MBTA 3282 and a sister leaving Woodland Station June 1972. Photo by Robert A. Newbegin, collection of Sam Bartlett.
The orange and cream is the paint scheme we intend for our 3321.

Here are some pictures of our cars in their MTA and MBTA days from Dave's Railpix: 3299 at Reservoir Car House, 3321 at Reservoir Yard, 3321 on the Riverside Line and 3321 at Cleveland Circle.
